WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1913.

Former Vermont Col. E. C. Benton gave Gardner a good run for his money in Massachusetts.

If in need of team work practice, Thaw's 11 lawyers might line up against the Dartmouth football varsity and get some valuable experience.

Ament the Washington fair, we were just a week ahead of the times yesterday. The fair on the neighboring heights comes next week, allowing the frost to gather on the pumpkin.

It doesn't make a very impressive start for an accused man, who says he is innocent, to try to dodge trial and the chance to prove his innocence. An innocent man ought to welcome the opportunity to disprove a false accusation.

When the work on the completion of the Southern New England railroad is resumed, the people of New England will have strong reason to renew their faith in the integrity of the Grand Trunk railroad, which was so rudely shaken when the work was stopped suddenly. There is hope of renewed faith.

If any other criminals should start a $400,000 fire in England, they would be dealt with in some drastic manner, as soon as caught, but not so with the English suffragettes who fired a great building for imbeciles and destroyed a large portion of the structure. The English military suffragettes are a different class altogether, apparently.

The fact that 50 applicants for admission were turned away from the new agricultural school at Lyndon indicates that there must be a large field for educational work of that sort in Vermont. The school, as well as the agricultural school at Randolph Center, has a fine opportunity to help toward the rejuvenation of Vermont along farm lines.

In addition to four county bar associations already announced, the Addison county lawyers sent a petition to Governor Fletcher asking for the promotion of Judge Loveland Munson to be chief justice in place of John W. Rowell, resigned. Apparently the wishes of the legal fraternity of the state had little influence on the man with the appointing power.

With plenty of water near at hand in the Missisquoi river, the village of East Berkshire seems to have been very negligent in failing to secure apparatus to pump the water up in emergencies like that of yesterday morning, when fire spread through the little hamlet. The penalty for that negligence was the loss of the greater part of the buildings in the village. It is idle now for East Berkshire to have vain regrets, but it is not too late for various other communities in the state to take their warning from the experience of that devastated village.

Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, who was nominated yesterday as the Republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts, is without doubt the strongest man the party could put up at the present time; and he will need all the strength he can muster when it comes to the day of the election. The splitting up of the votes among three leading candidates, Gardner, David I. Walsh, the present lieutenant governor, and Charles S. Bird, the Progressive party candidate, seems to give Walsh the commanding position at the present time as his party, the Democratic, is likely to be affected only slightly by the Progressive candidacy, whereas Bird will draw considerably from the normal Republican strength.

THE PLAY CENSORSHIP.

It is a comforting thought to the lesser lights of the theatrical circuit that a revolt has sprung up in New York City against the presentation of certain plays which are called immoral. The revolt has gone to such an extent that efforts are being made to suppress the production of two pieces which are called the worst. The smaller cities will appreciate this effort at censorship in the center of the play-producing circles of the United States, not only because it betokens a high moral tone in the metropolis, but also because it will save them from a great deal of trouble and infliction of shame. Each season these smaller cities are besieged by plays without discrimination, which are heralded by the smooth writing press agents as "huge successes in New York," etc., and the plays are accepted in the spirit they are advertised because the theatre-goers in the secondary cities are not in a position to know first-hand and are forced to take the say-so of the advance writers. The result is that the smaller communities are inflicted with plays of more than doubtful morality and the attendants are nauseated by the presentation of some of them, all because they were deluded by the statements which were concocted in New York and foisted upon them. It is for this reason that newspapers are becoming careful of the matter which they present to their readers regarding plays of which they themselves are not cognizant and are pruning down the extravagant claims made of "huge successes," etc., in the great cities, at the same time warning, by edict of federal law, that such matter is advertising and should be treated as such rather than as original matter with the newspapers. These efforts will largely be made unnecessary if the censorship of plays in the large cities shall become effective. Therefore, the present movement in New York City is being watched with no small interest in the lesser cities of the country. It means a good deal to them.

CIRCUS FEAT BY DRIVER.

Thrown from Sulky, Landed on Feet, Remounted and Finished Race.

Brattleboro, Sept. 24.—Perfect weather gave the 28th annual Valley fair a beautiful start yesterday, and between 3,000 and 4,000 persons were on the grounds in the afternoon. They found every stall in the horse and in the cattle departments full and more than 2,000 fowls in the poultry exhibit, while the sheep and swine were above the average in quality and quantity.

The new feature of the fair was the "made in Brattleboro" building, which contained a dozen interesting exhibits by local manufacturers that were especially interesting.

In the first heat of the 2:28 pace and 2:35 trot, Pickle, driver of Fairmount, was thrown at the first turn but managed to land on his feet, hang to his horse and remount his sulky and finish.

dermen, Mrs. Miotti had appeared and stated she was dissatisfied with the location 20 feet back from the street and wanted to build within seven or eight feet of the line. At that time it was stated that the city has no ordinance covering that point, although the charter as recently amended gives the city the right to frame an ordinance covering the matter. The petitioner for the permit had appeared on the permit voted last week. That was all the council did in special session.
